No flag but the Old Flag—the Red, White and Blue,
With the stars of a Union unbroken and true;

Whose blood bought the banner your valor must save

FRIDAY MORNING, SEPT. 18, 1863.

THE NEWS.—We are so much crowded by intelligence from the East, and by reports of proceedings at the Fair, that we yield all our editorial space; current news must be published or forgotten: what we have to say will keep, till we have room enough for it.

John Van Buren an Abolitionist.

The following extracts are taken from a speech by John Van Buren at the great Union meeting recently held in New York city. Such language, coming from one who has been a life-long democrat, sounds strangely. But such expression only shows the great revulsion which is going on in the public sentiment, and which is developed by an earnest determination to perpetuate the Republic:

No man can fail to see that the democratic party has been dissolved by aggressions of the South. I hope the time will come when there will be a national party, true to freedom. When I look back to old Virginia and remember that she gave us these territories, that a Virginian penned the Declaration of Independence—penned the Ordinance—I cannot but think that in old Virginia some men like Henry, Washington or Jefferson will yet arise and throw his gigantic power against slavery, especially when he can point them to these five stalwart sons in the Northwest breathing the spirit of liberty. [Immense applause.] That he will remember the declaration of her statesmen in former times—of Patrick Henry, George Mason, and others.

Further on he uses this exceedingly strong language:

I am the unmitigated enemy of slavery, and would have it abolished without delay.

I say, therefore, for myself—and I wish to be understood as speaking for myself alone—that let what will come, I shall, under no necessity whatever, support any man who does not believe slavery to be an unmixed curse and who will not by virtue of his office use all constitutional power to abolish it.

But I ask by what mode are we to reach the object in view? The answer is plain. By going back directly to that adopted and pursued by the immortal founders of our Government. It is composed briefly in this:

No more slave States;
No slave Territories;
The withdrawal of the support of the Federal Government from slavery, and the abolition of it, whenever it can be reached by constitutional means.

The above expressions are certainly unequivocal, but the sentiments they contain were even exceeded by Mr. Van Buren in his peroration. He avowed himself an out and out abolitionist. He said:

Mr. President, I yield to no man in my devotion to the Union. I reverence the wisdom and patriotism of those men who, amid untold difficulties, formed it. I appreciate the untold blessings which it has conferred upon a happy and prosperous people. I know, and I ask you to bear in mind, the enviable distinction we have acquired abroad. I am proud to remember how it was made, under a declaration that defied tyranny, and unequivocally asserted that all men were created equal, under a constitution which closely followed up this declaration, is essentially anti-slavery in its spirit. There does it stand out a bright example to challenge the admiration of the world. Yet there is one thing which remains to be done to perfect this proud fabric and render it as endurable as time. Strike the manacles from the slave, and elevate him to a position of a moral relation, intelligent, and if need be a political being! [Immense applause.]

WASHINGTON ON POPULAR TUMULTS.—A contemporary recalls very opportunely the following passage respecting Shay's rebellion, taken from a letter written by Washington to Mr. Henry Lee, then in Congress, under date of Oct. 31, 1786:

"You talk, my good sir, of employing influence to appease the present tumults in Massachusetts. I know not where that influence is to be found, nor, if attainable, that it would be a proper remedy for these disorders. Influence is not government. Let us have a government by which our lives, liberties and properties will be secured; or let us know the worst at once. Under these impressions, my humble opinion is that there is a call for decision; know precisely what the insurgents aim at. If they have real grievances, redress them if possible, or acknowledge the justice of them and your inability to do it in the present moment. If they have not, employ the force of Government against them at once. If this is inadequate, all will be convinced that the superstructure is bad or wants support."

REBEL APPEAL TO THE WOMEN TO DRIVE THE MEN TO THE FIELD.—Perhaps nothing could better show the straits to which the rebels find themselves reduced than the frantic appeals for aid which the Richmond papers are making to the women of Secessia. Here is an extract from the latest of these appeals:

"Will not the women help us, then, to put every man in his place? Will they not refuse so much as to speak to any one who evades his duty? We all know that they, by combining together, can drive all stragglers at once to the field; they can make existence intolerable to those who stay; but to those who go and do the devoir of gallant gentlemen, they can promise paradise, and keep their word. Now, Love is what women can do for us at this moment—for us? for themselves and for us all."

This is putting things rather loosely, but the language of a desperate man must not be scrutinized too severely.

THE DISPOSITION OF CONSCRIPTS.—It is understood in army circles in the East that the regiments in the Army of the Potomac will first be filled from the ranks of the conscripts, and then, successively, Grant's Rosecrans' and the Army of the South will be filled to the maximum.

The State Fair at Salem.

[FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.]

SALEM, Wednesday, Sept. 16, 1863.

"A nice London fog" a cockney would say, but really one you could almost carve with a scoop shovel, lifted at 9 o'clock, and left a day as beautiful as could be desired.

After some exercises of the Infantry companies and the Salem Light Battery, it was announced that the opening address of the President would be delivered at the stand, on the track near the pavilion. Several acres of people and carriages soon gathered at that place, and the exercises were opened by music by the Bands, and an appropriate prayer by the Rev. Mr. Leslie, after which Judge Thornton was introduced and spoke as follows:

Members of the Oregon State Agricultural Society:

The occasion of our Third Annual Fair has devolved upon me the duty of addressing you preliminary to declaring it open for examination by visitors, and for the exhibition of specimens of the mechanical, agricultural, artistical and household skill and industry of the people.

And first, permit me to thank you for the confidence implied by your having placed me in a position which pre-supposes, at least, a desire on my part, to contribute something towards developing the resources of Oregon.

I trust that I may claim an honest purpose, to advance the great interests of the State through the channel of its industrial pursuits, and by means of our association to give honor to skill.

I congratulate you upon the contrast between our present large and widening field of usefulness as compared with our small and by no means encouraging beginning, to say nothing of the difficulties encountered in awakening public attention to the great importance of an organization like this. We cannot fail to mark the difference between this and our first annual fair. The latter, we did indeed, regard as a great success, full of most encouraging promise, when we considered it with regard to either the number of visitors, or the quality, character and number of articles entered. But if that was a success, this is indeed a triumph that should cause us to thank God and take courage. At our first exhibition the number of articles entered were at most a few score. Now they are at least as many hundreds. Then our visitors did not exceed a few thousands, but now they are still greater. This occasion is interesting, considering it not only as an annual fair for the exhibition of the best specimens of fruit, cereals and stock from the fields, and of industrial skill from the work shop and the household, but as an annual festival or gala day to which we come up from all parts of the State with warm hearts glowing with gratitude to God for crowning the year with goodness, and with cheerful countenances, in which we at once express our social affections and our appreciation of the blessings of a benign Providence.

The season of Autumn, when the harvests have been gathered into barns, and while the trees of the orchard are yet red with the drooping boughs, is a time peculiarly appropriate to come up with general and united expression of gratitude to a Supreme Being for the fruits of the earth, for the enjoyment of health, and for civil and religious liberty. The return of the season in which circumstances make it necessary to hold our annual fair, is well calculated to remind the sober and thoughtful person (and most of this class of persons are such) that another agricultural year is completed, with all its incidents, its toils, its hopes, its fears, its perplexities and its rewards. He is feelingly reminded that "the harvest is past, and the summer is ended;" and it would be indeed strange if he did not in such a connection ask himself the most solemn question the human mind ever ponders. No man so much as the farmer realizes that only God can give success to his efforts. Not in lectures or books he learns that the bright rays of the sun, the descending shower, the fleeting zephyrs, the early cloud and the morning dew, and even the hoary frosts of winter are the agencies employed by a beneficent and most bountiful Providence to fill the mouth with food, and the heart with gladness. Associating so much with Nature, and seeing so much of her various moods and aspects, he has almost necessarily a higher appreciation of her bounty than persons have who are confined within the precincts of towns and cities. He, more than they, sees the force of that first line in the pastorals of Virgil, where he addresses Tityrus as "playing upon his lute under the spreading shade of a beech tree."

The waving fields of grain, the ripening fruits, the opening flowers, and the forests vocal with the song of birds, together with all the other diversified scenery of the landscape, gently solicit his heart to raise the praise of Him without whose notice a sparrow does not fall to the ground.

The degree of health and competence which have been enjoyed by the people of this State since we last met here, is a subject of congratulation. With no very marked exceptions, the body of the people have enjoyed the blessings of life, health and competence, as will be seen by any one who will look around upon this vast assembly and observe the bright eyes and blooming cheeks of the multitude, giving testimony that earth's first physical good is bestowed upon those, in a pre-eminent degree, who labor in the rural districts. This consideration of health should tend to check any envy which the former might be tempted to feel in view of the rapid gains of the merchant, who not unfrequently sacrifices health of body and serenity of mind as the price of his rapid gain, which, when accumulated, forces upon him a conviction of the fact that great wealth and all its supposed advantages exist only in comparison.

Agriculture is more than ever attracting the attention of statesmen at home and abroad. It is coming to be regarded as the great commanding interest of nations, and is, with the increase of light and knowledge, challenging an increased attention; and although the nation has been engaged more than two years in defending itself against a most wicked attempt to overturn the Constitution and laws of the country and to erect upon their ruins institutions that dishonor free labor, yet our Government has within that time and under these most adverse circumstances, done more to encourage agriculture than was ever done in all the previous history of the nation. The National Legislature is for the first time beginning to have something like a just conception of the application of mind to agriculture, and of uniting its practice with its philosophy.

Ladies, we are happy to see you here supporting and encouraging by your presence and the many specimens of your skill, neatness and industry, a Society which legitimately tends to diminish your toil and to elevate your character and position. Do not imagine that you are without your influence and power for great good here to-day. Ladies, I fear, are sometimes inclined to think, when they reflect upon the subject, that they are placed in a situation inferior to man's, and that they have no influence in society and scarcely any duties to perform. But could all the ladies of a nation be brought together in one vast assembly to be addressed upon the subject of their powers and influence, how would they listen to the burning words of eloquence and the hallowed accents of philosophy and chemistry, portraying the power of woman, and pointing out the great highway of her duties. Thus listening, they would learn that our security for the permanency of the free institutions that bless the nation, mainly depend upon the habits of virtue and industry and the prevalence of knowledge and education in which, from the very nature of her position in the family she is principally instrumental, laboring as she does during the most impressible years of her offspring, upon mind and spirit which are to last forever, marked with the impress of her own mind, her own temper and spirit.

Soldiers—In the name of the Society I have the honor to represent, and in behalf of which I speak, I welcome you here to-day. At a period like the present, when traitors, maddened by disappointment, and driven to desperation by the conviction that the intelligence and virtue of the people of the United States had deprived them of power, now seek to pull down the pillars of State, and overwhelm all in one common ruin, an armed and loyal soldiery is, under God, the salvation of the Nation. It is for you and men of pure hearts like yours, to defend the Altar of Liberty from the profanation of traitor hands stained with fraternal blood. No one of doubtful loyalty carries a weapon in your ranks; while in many ways he shows that his good will and sympathies are secretly with those who are wading through rivers of blood to destroy that Constitution, and to subvert the best government God in his goodness ever vouchsafed to man. With such a patriot soldiery the pages of our history will continue to brighten with the ages of increasing glory until the recording Angel shall blot out the last syllable of time, and the trumpet of judgment shall summon patriot and traitor to the Bar of God.

Although there are such vast hosts arrayed in unnatural struggle to destroy their country, I will not cloud the picture of this day with even a shade of doubt that as a people we shall continue to enjoy the protection of that Supreme Being who nursed our infancy in the lap of His Providence, and who has led us up to the mature manhood of a great and puissant people, whose brilliant prospects invite to enthusiasm, and whose history furnishes us with so many motives to still greater effort in the fulfillment of our destiny, and with so many proofs that in order to our continued growth as a Nation we must cherish principles, morals, institutions and pursuits, such as originally planted the Nation and gave vigor to its growth.

[illegible] An[illegible] soldiers! be assured that this God is a God of justice, as well as of Providence, and that for those who [illegible] the Southern [illegible]." He has in reservation [illegible] in time, and [illegible] (Cheers and laughter.)

Although present dangers demand our vigilance, we will look in vain for anything in our circumstances as a nation that can awaken serious apprehension as to the future. The scenes immediately surrounding us, if we except the glitter of these weapons of warfare, all betoken the habits and pursuits of peace. The graces of matronly virtue, the smiles of youthful beauty, the dignity of hoary age, the strong intellect of [illegible] manhood, the happy faces in this vast multitude, and all these specimens of mechanical and household art, and these products of the field, the garden and the orchard, are so many proofs that as a people we are still prosperous, and that our doom is not written (as our enemies would affirm) on the pages which contain the sad and mournful story of the decline and fall of other republics. But believe me when I tell you that these lessons of history are not for us. That we are destined to a brief career, and that in a very short time we shall exhibit the painful spectacle of permanently divided commonwealths and petty republics, maddened [illegible] to implacable enmity, is the voice of a standing prophecy published with trumpet tongues when doubt and danger marked the first collisions of opinions. (Voices, "No," [illegible]) The very birth of our greatness witnessed the same calumny from the lips of despotism, which still has too much interest in our defamation ever to award us the meed of praise.

When the walls of Sumter were beleaguered by rebellious traitors, and the citadels of the nation were ascertained to have been betrayed by the treachery of Buchanan, at that time commander-in-chief of the army and navy, the clouds hanging over the country did appear to be very dark and threatening.

But in the midst of the portentous gloom, of the darkest period of our history, the fires of patriotism kindled in the hearts of the people. The glory of the past lighted up the great highway of duty, leading on the unmeasured future. The people heard the call to arms, and a million of true men seized their weapons to vindicate the national honor, and to fling once more to heaven's sweet breath that symbol of our nationality which had gone down amid the fire and smoke and thunder of Sumter. With this example of the alacrity with which these our countrymen sprang to arms, at the first summons of duty, fresh in our remembrance, we cannot distrust the future. We will not heed the sneers of the traditional skeptics, who tell us that the last hope of human liberty is waning, and that entrenched tyrannies will soon [illegible] in the gloom and disaster of a nation's ruin, upon her tears and misfortunes. Every page which records the history of this most wanton and unholy rebellion, affords ample proof of the permanency of our institutions, and that this government will survive the shock of collision with traitors, whether open and avowed or secret and deceptive. ("Yes, yes," and cheers.) Firm as the mountains which traverse the interior of our country, our institutions will experience no change, save one of purification, and increased power for usefulness in everything tending to ameliorate the condition of suffering humanity, and to relieve the oppressed, irrespective of the accident of birth, or race, or country.

As the storm-clouds roar along the sides of our mountains that lift their heads into everlasting sunshine, finally pass away, leaving them unscathed, with not a charm impaired or a feature changed, so shall the civil institutions of this nation survive the transient tornado of this civil strife, instigated by disappointed ambition, stung by reflections awakened by power departing from hands unworthy to hold it. Then armed with the majesty of virtue, and proud of the possession of unequalled freedom, I am sure that the American soldier will never permit either foreign or domestic foes to despoil the temple of liberty of the ark of the covenant, or suffer the constitutional government of the country to be overturned by the madness or jealousy of parties, or by criminal ambition; and that with the last drop of life's blood he will defend the beautiful symbol of our nationality,

"And smile to see its splendors fly
In triumph o'er his closing eye."

In conclusion, it only remains for me to declare that the Third Annual Fair of the Oregon State Agricultural Society is now open for the examination of visitors, and for the exhibition of agricultural, mechanical, household and artistic skill and industry.

After the address the trials of speed of horses, mares and geldings, pacers, trotters and runners was had.

TROTTING, ONE MILE, PREMIUM $100.

For this heat there were but three entries, viz: W. H. Wallace's bay horse Tom, M. Morgan's mare Sylvia, and M. M. Southworth's horse Black Prince. Prince and Tom got off together exactly, and kept pretty near even all the way round, but Prince led home one length: time, 3:22. Sylvia got away two lengths behind, and lost all the way round.

PACING, ONE MILE, PREMIUM $10.

Two entries: Quimby & Bennett's horse, Humpey, and Sherlock & Bacon's horse, Pike. This was a poor race. Pike started slow, but kept his gait well until coming home, he broke into a gallop and nearly stopped. Humpey got a length the start, increased it half a dozen, broke five times, and finally got home forty feet ahead. Time, 3:24.

RUNNING, ONE MILE, PREMIUM $25.

Ten entries for this race, and all started well but Baskett's. Humboldt and W. R. Cannon's grey horse soon left all the others far behind, Humboldt winning a length and a half; time, 1:55.

No entries were made for the plowing match much to our disappointment. It seems a little strange that there is not one young man in Oregon ambitious to turn the best half acre in the shortest or in a given time. Your scribbling correspondent would like to try that himself, but there was not a team or even a plow on the ground. Twelve hundred and fifty tickets were sold at the gates to-day.

THE MEETING THIS EVENING

must not pass unmentioned as an incident of the fair. The assemblage was the largest, probably, that ever met in Oregon, and so far as could be seen were animated by only one purpose, in relation to the war or the rebellion, and that is to prosecute the one till the other shall have a place only in history.—Judge Williams delivered the speech of the evening. He remarked that he had been importuned to assist in a reconstruction of the of the Democratic party. To this he was unalterably opposed, and he would have ought to do with no party but one whose object was the maintenance of this Union and this Government; and when he used the term Government he used it in no ideal or imaginary or speculative sense, but he meant the present, actual, living, flesh and blood Administration of the Government, that was trying, as he believed honestly to crush out this rebellion. The judge indulged in some remarks not very flattering to sympathizes, not to say Copperheads, and he was vociferously cheered throughout. Other speakers addressed the crowd till a late hour. A message of cheer was received by telegraph from prominent citizens of Portland, and read to the assembly, who received it with three rousers for Portland and the Union.

GEN. BUTLER AND SECRETARY STANTON.—Gen. Butler dropped in at the War Department a few days after his return, and while there, according to the N. Y. Herald's correspondence, the following authentic conversation transpired:

Gen. Butler—I have called, Mr. Stanton, to learn why I was removed from the Department of the Gulf.

Secretary Stanton—I assure you, General, that it was from no lack of confidence in your patriotism, capacity or integrity.

Gen. Butler—I did not ask you, Mr. Secretary, why I was not removed, but why I was.

Secretary Stanton—You are a lawyer, General, and so am I, and you are aware that it is not always polite to tell all we know.

Gen. Butler—Well, what are you going to do with me now?

Secretary Stanton—How would you like to take the Army of the Potomac?

Gen. Butler—Did you ever know a merchant, Mr. Secretary, to invest largely in an old stock of goods?

This was the responsive and suggestive poser to the Secretary. Whereupon Gen. Butler made his exit from the War Department, confident of his being even with the Pennsylvania pleader.

INTERESTING TO "HORSE" DOCTORS.—The following decision has just been made by the Deputy Commissioner of Internal Revenue:

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15th, 1863.

Sir: In reply to yours of the 12th inst., enclosing communication from Dr. ——, I have to say that the amount expended by a physician for the keeping of a horse, used exclusively in the business of his profession, is a legitimate deduction from income. Very respectfully,

EDWARD McPHERSON,
Deputy Commissioner.

G. P. Putnam Esq., Collector Internal Revenue, 937 Broadway.

SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE DAILY OREGONIAN

LATER FROM THE EAST.

Dates to September 12.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—The Tribune's special dispatch denies the truth of a statement, recently published in a London letter, that one of the Anglo-rebel rams had sailed from England during the last week of August. Official Government dispatches, quite as late as any newspaper correspondence, positively state that all rebel rams whose departure was threatened are still in the yards where they were built.

The World says: Our correspondent in Gen. Banks' Department gives us in a private letter intimations of a highly important movement which has just been set on foot in that Department. Until further advised we do not need to give details. We may say at present, however, that the movement is one which, if successful, will be productive of results of the highest importance.

The World's special dispatch says: We have authority for stating that Gen. Gilmore has determined that when he got full possession of Morris Island, if Beauregard did not surrender he would throw incendiary shells into the city for the purpose of destroying it. His guns cover the base of supplies for the Confederate forces.

The Times' special says: The names of deserters from the several armies, and particularly the frightfully great host of absentees from the Army of the Potomac are soon to be published in the newspapers of the several States by districts. The War Department has determined to spare no efforts to force them to return to the field of duty.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 12th.—The Commercial says: The work on the military railroad from Nicholasville, Ky., to Knoxville, Tenn., has been commenced and will be pushed forward with great rapidity. One thousand men to the mile will soon be employed. Negroes are being impressed along the line of the road—every third slave being taken. They will be clothed and paid. Unemployed slaves who have come into our lines in Southern States are being forwarded. They will be paid one-third of their wages—the balance being retained to provide them with homes when the war is over. The city of Louisville subscribed $600,000 to the Lebanon branch and throughout the State the heartiest co-operation will be given to the great enterprise.

An excursion train on the western division of the Ohio and Mississippi railroad ran into a gravel train on Thursday last. The engineer was killed and 15 passengers wounded.

WANTED.—TWENTY-FIVE GIRLS, to do general housework, can find employment at good wages by applying immediately at

THANKS.—Charles Barrett of the news depot on Front street, has our thanks for a most liberal supply of newspapers pictorials and magazines, of the latest dates. Barrett always keeps on hand the latest publications of the day

S J McCormick, of the Franklin Book store, also furnished us with a large bundle of reading matter, of the same variety. We feel ourself your debtor McCormick

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.—We call the attention of our readers to the number of new advertisements, which appear this morning. You may be benefitted by reading the same

THEATRICAL.—"The Stranger" will be performed to-morrow night, at the theatre, in which Julia Dean Hayne and G B Waldron will appear in the leading characters

A MUSS.—A small fight took place last evening on Front street between two men. Nobody hurt.

VERY SCARCE.—It is almost an impossibility to scare up a respectable three-line item at the present time. Our city is exceedingly dull. It would be a good idea if some of our citizens on Front street would introduce the game of "foot-ball," which was all the rage here so remarkably dull season several years ago. Such a game would create nearly as good an activity in "feet" as at present ex in San Francisco, though each "share" might not be more than two in number. [Our "local," not being able to stand the pressure occasioned by "those last remark," was carried off the stage by the "devil."]

In Every Age of the World, the professions have been slow to admit the value of new discoveries or the expediency of adopting them in practice. It is not to the legal profession that we look for reforms in jurisprudence neither do we find the advocates of medical reform among physicians. Each deprecates whatever is found to innovate upon received opinions and established usage. Hence the opposition which medical men too often exhibit to the use of private remedies whatever their acknowledged value or great efficiency in the cure of disease. No medicine has ever done more for the relief of human suffering than DR. OSGOOD'S INDIA CHOLAGOGUE. The certainty with which it cures Fever and Ague, and eradicates bile from the system is acknowledged by all. Do you prefer a speedy and effectual cure to a regular and scient... run of disease? Try the Cholagogue and the object is accomplished. Then tell your suffering neighbor what it has done for you that it may do the same for him

THE RECONCILIATION.—I once picked up a man in the market-place. It was said to me, "He is a brute—let him alone." I took him home with me, and kept him fourteen days and nights through his delirium; and he nearly frightened Mary out of her wits one night, chasing her all round the house with a boot in his hand. But she recovered her wits, and he recovered his. He said to me. "You wouldn't think I had a wife and child?" "Well, I shouldn't." "Yes, I have; and God bless her dear little heart. My Mary is as pretty a little wife as ever stepped," said he. I asked him where they lived. "They live two miles away from here." "When did you see them last?" "About two years ago." Then he told me his sad story. I said, "You must go back again." "No," he replied, "I mustn't go back. I won't; my wife is better without me than with me. I will not go back any more. I have knocked her, and kicked her, and abused her; do you suppose I will go back again?"

But at length he consented to accompany me to the house. I knocked at the door, and his wife opened it. "Is this Mrs. Richardson?" "Yes, sir." "Well, this is Mr. Richardson; and, Mr. Richardson, this is Mrs. Richardson. Now, come into the house." They went in. The wife sat on one side of the room, and the man on the other. I wanted to see who would speak first, and it was the woman. But before she spoke, she fidgeted a good deal. She pulled up her apron till she got hold of the hem, and then she pulled it down again. Then she folded it up closely, and jerked it out through her fingers, an inch at a time; and then she spread it all down again; and then she looked all about the room, and said, "Well, William;" and he said, "Well, Mary." He had a large handkerchief round his neck, and she said, "You had better take the handkerchief off—you'll need it when you go out." He began to fumble about it. The knot was large enough; he could have untied it, if he had liked, but he said, "Will you untie it Mary?" And she worked away at it; but, somehow or other, her fingers were clumsy, and she could not get it off: their eyes met, and the love-light was not all quenched—he opened his arms gently, and she fell into them. If you had seen those white arms clasped about his neck, and he sobbing on her bosom, and the child looking in wonder—first at one, and then at the other—you would have said, "It is not a brute; it is a man, with a great warm heart in his breast." Oh, how many hearts and homes might be cheered, if Christian men and women would visit poor drunkards, and point them to the cross of Christ!—J. B. Gough.

ORDER—HEAVEN'S FIRST LAW.—Here is a golden rule to promote comfort in the household:

Never leave things lying about—a shawl here, a pair of slippers there, and a bonnet somewhere else—trusting to a servant to set things to rights. No matter how many servants you have, it is a miserable habit, and if its source is not in the intellectual and moral character, it will inevitably terminate there. If you have used the dipper, towell, tumbler' etc., put them back in their places and you will know where to find them when you want them again. Or, if you set the example of carelessness, do not blame your servants for following it. Children should be taught to put their things back in their places as soon as they are old enough to use them; and if each member of the family were to observe this simple rule, the house would never get out of order, and a large amount of vexation and useless labor would be avoided.

SOLDIERS ONLY MEN.—A soldier writes to the Springfield Republican:

Of all the delusions, with which history feeds you, none are more unceremoniously shattered by experience than that of war. This one is holy, the forces are immense, the battles bloody—yet in the front and centre of an invading army, within speaking distance of the enemy, the war-pictures of earlier years seem as far off as they did in boyhood. We are filled with the same feelings and impressions and impulses that we had in private life. Your brass don't delight you, if you have to scour it; your big boots don't please you, if you've got a blister. Say what you will about enthusiasm, and pride and all that, a soldier marches out to dress-parade very much as he used to march out the barn-yard to milk. He's the same man.

THE COST OF TREASON.—A Vicksburg correspondent gives the following incident:

Desiring a room in a central part of the city, and seeing one that suited me, I made application for it to the owner, a very gentlemanly looking physician, and he told me he had nothing to say in the matter! By the terms of the Confiscation Act a fine block of buildings, worth perhaps $20,000 or $30,000, was taken from him, and thus the earnings of a lifetime were dashed from his grasp when he thought he held them most securely. And this is not a single example. All these fine rows of business structures, all these fine residences—and there are hundreds of the latter, built in every style of taste and elegance—belong, almost without exception, to Uncle Sam.

THE DIFFERENCE.—The New York Commercial Advertiser states the difference between Generals Hunter and Gilmore, in a summary fashion, as follows:

Gen. Hunter is not and Gen. Gilmore is an engineer and a skilful artillery officer. Gen. Hunter moved slowly and Gen. Gilmore rapidly. The one looked on at the iron-clads and the other kept the iron-clads looking upon him.

DISSOLUTION.—A colored firm in Newark (N. J.,) having suffered some pecuniary embarrassments, recently closed business, and the senior member gave to the public the following "notis:" "De disholution of coparsnips hertofo resisting 'twixt me and Mose Jones in the barber perfession, am heretofo resolved. Pussons who ose must pay to de scriber. Dem what de firm ose must call on Jones, as the firm is insolved."

A formal fashionable visitor thus addressed a little girl: "How are you my dear?"

"Very well, I thank you," she replied.

The visitor then added, "Now, my dear, you should ask me how I am."

The child simply and honestly replied, "But I don't want to know."

A young lady, who is better acquainted with French than farming, was recently married to a farmer. In examining her new domains, she one day visited the cow-house, when she thus interrogated the milk-maid: "By-the-by, Mary, which of these cows is it that gives the buttermilk?"
